CUBIX HOUSE

#781, SECTOR 12
PANCHKULA
HARYANA, INDIA

BARG

Located in Panchkula's Sector 12, Cubix House is conventional living through thoughtful design and enduring aesthetics. Spread across a 14-marla plot, this family home embraces simplicity while subtly weaving in architectural nuance and material richness, offering an elevated experience of everyday life.

From the outside, the façade makes a subdued yet memorable statement. Clad in textured tiles arranged in a cube-like geometry, the design language, Cubix, derives its name from this distinct tiled pattern. The cladding is neither loud nor ornamental.

Natural light and ventilation are prioritized throughout, with skylights and expansive glass windows allowing daylight to animate the interiors.

Inside, the home caters to the needs of three generations, including grandparents, parents, and two young children, ensuring comfort, privacy, and connectivity across three levels. The ground floor accommodates two bedrooms, tailored for ease of access.

Designed according to Vastu principles, Cubix House is organized to harness positive energy, natural ventilation, and a harmonious spatial flow.

The flooring is a celebration of Italian elegance with Dyna marble that lends warmth and sophistication. In contrast, absolute black granite accents, used selectively, create bold anchors within the space.

Designed with both aesthetics and safety in mind, the central wooden staircase, connects the levels in a manner that is easy for elderly movement and safe for playful children.

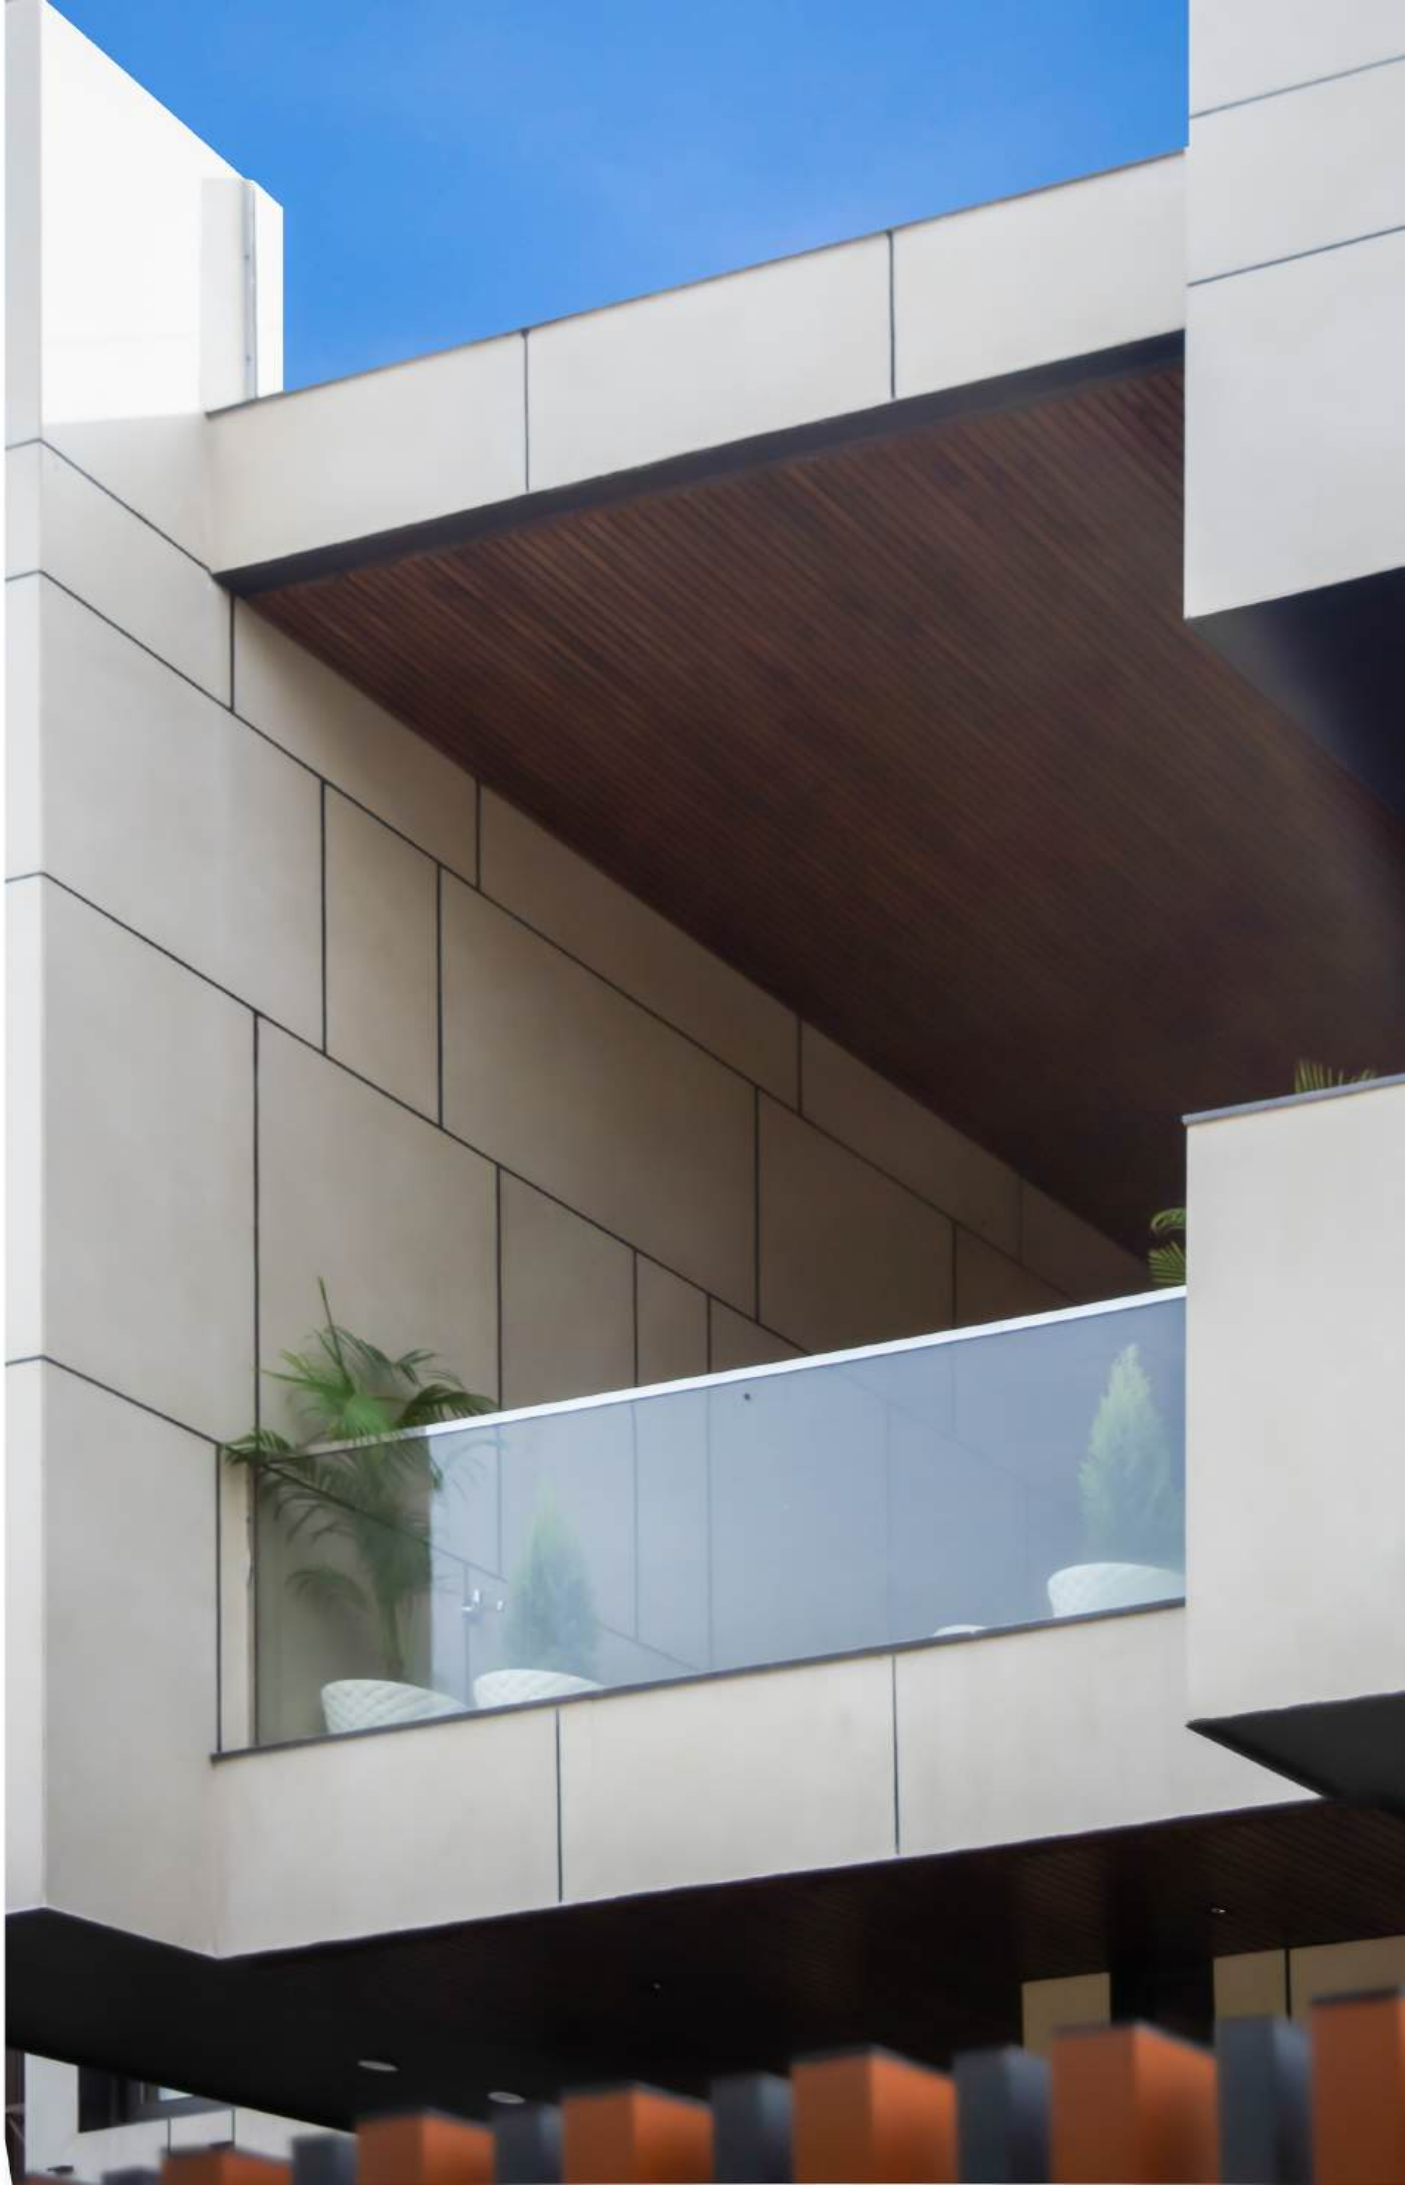

The cladding is neither loud nor ornamental. Paired with a restrained palette and balanced proportions, it lends the house a sober and everlasting presence, ideal for multigenerational family seeking permanence and calm.

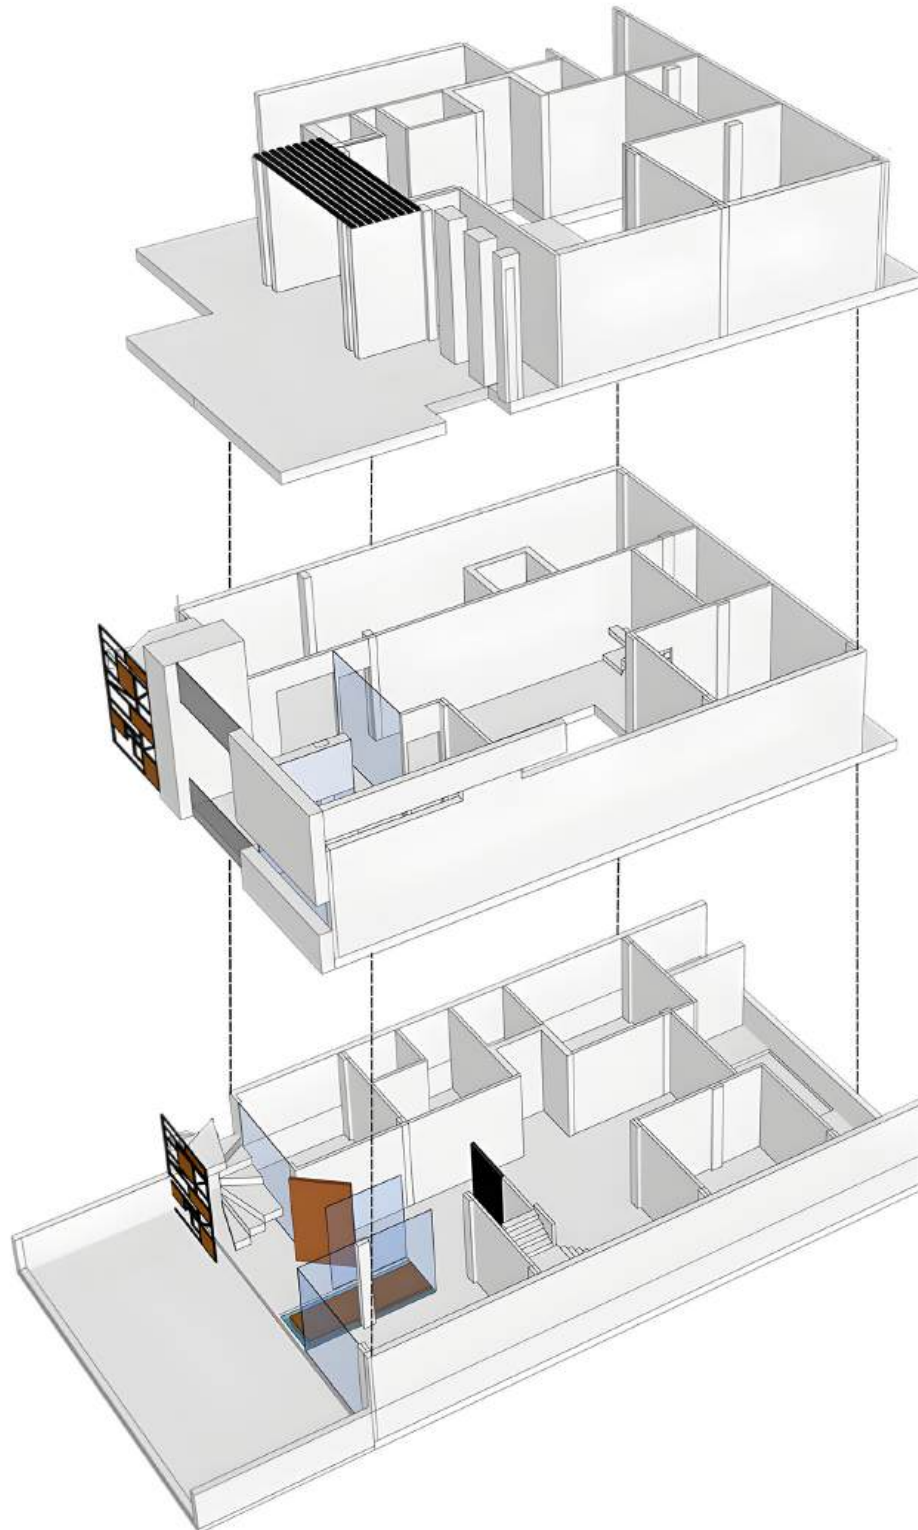

The balcony at Cubix House extends as a seamless projection of the geometric façade — a bold yet minimal cube carved with precision. Clad in warm wooden soffits and framed by sleek metal lines, it offers a quiet pause between indoors and outdoors.

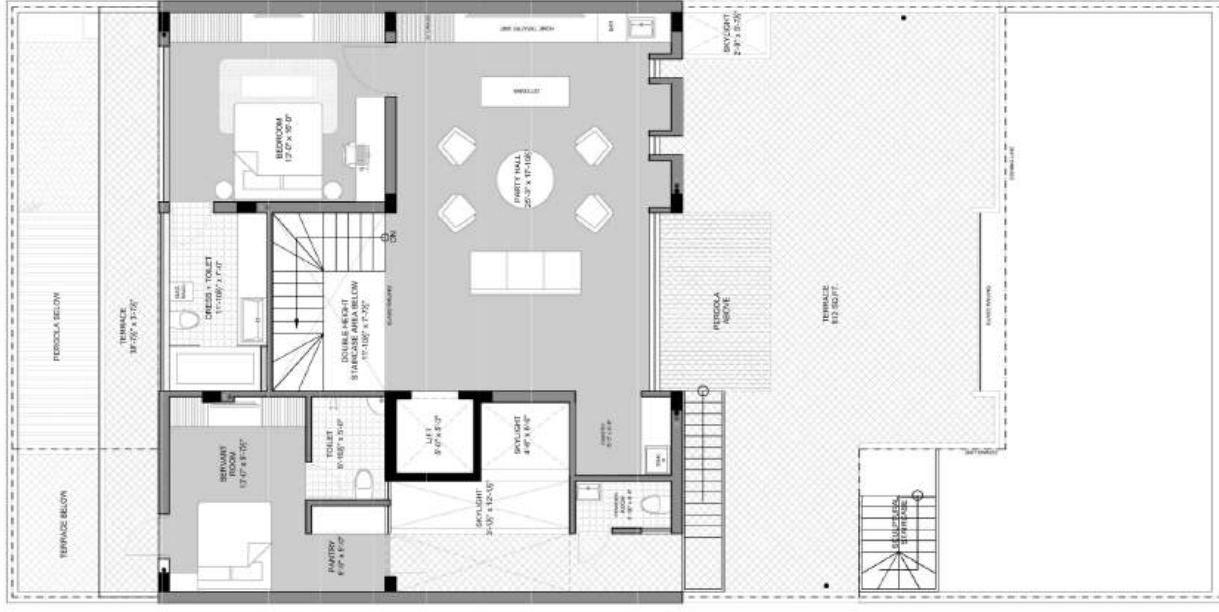

Where Simplicity Meets Soul

Cubix House does not aim to be outlandish. Instead, it celebrates the quiet beauty of a well-lived home, simple in intent, unique in execution. With carefully selected materials, Vastu-informed planning, and a warm architectural expression, this home exemplifies how conventional living can be elevated into something quietly exceptional.
